

Name of Submitter: Denise Johnson

Submitter Email: johnsondt@wssu.edu

Developing a Consortium of Next Generation Black STEM Teachers

This presentation highlights the development of a consortium to increase the number of black STEM teachers. Participants will learn how the consortium was developed, how education majors are recruited, and the professional development provided to Next Generation students. Participants will engage in activities that promote STEM across the curriculum including STEM in social studies, ELA and art.

Presentation Target:

Higher Education

Presenter(s):

1. Denise Johnson, Associate Professor, Winston-Salem State University
2. Kim Pemberton, Department Chair, Department of Education, Winston-Salem State University